From the Library’s homepage, click on the Databases link. Click on the “F” button to quickly jump to Films on Demand.

Click on the link to open the database. For this example, I am looking for videos on the nursing profession.

In the search box, type in your first search term, such as “nursing.” To narrow the focus, I am going to type the “AND” operator and then type the word “profession”. This means the search will retrieve videos that include BOTH terms “nursing” and “profession.”

You can see that this search produced 54 results. When searching in Films on Demand, be aware that the results will show video segments, video series, and Full Videos.

Segments are short individual clips that make up an entire Full video. A video series is made up of Full videos.

In the first video in the list, you can see that it is a segment entitled “Nursing: A Demanding Profession” which is part of the Full Video title “The Patient Care Nursing Team.”

By clicking on the Segment title, you are taken to the page where you can view the video.

Because this is a Video Segment in a larger full program, you may want to browse the other video segments as they may also contain helpful information pertaining to your research.

All the videos will include a list of Tools underneath the video. Click on the “Citation” link to pull up a list of citation styles specific to this video.

For example, if you are using MLA, you can easily copy the citation and paste it into a Bibliography. You also have the ability to export directly to a citation generator software such as EasyBib.
